The future of healthcare is marked by uncertainty, confusion, and lack of consensus-but the architecture profession can play a pivotal role in identifying solutions that work. Help change the conversation with this forum presented by the AIA Academy of Architecture for Health. An interactive polling and panel session on the future of healthcare design, this discussion will focus on population health- and value-based care along with their impact on the hospital campus of the future. The session is part of a series that will look at the future of healthcare.
