DESCRIPTION

Historic renovation and rehabilitation projects bring with them public programs and design restrictions. In these cases, windows are often a topic of interest and concern. Should they be replaced, or can they be repaired? If they're replaced, what are the options? Which option is best for each situation? Join this hands-on session to learn how window replacement or preservation can address concerns with energy, maintenance considerations, and general modernization. This is a great opportunity to learn about the historic significance of windows in existing buildings as well as National Park Service guidelines for historic window rehabilitation.
